Fall of a Balcony.

The balcony of the Oriental Hotel on Fourth street, Williamsburg, gave way on Monday night, being over-crowded with men and women, watching the soldiers of the Seventy-first New York Regiment, and the Forty-seventh Regiment, of Brooklyn march past on their way to the ferry-house at the foot of Broadway. The Eckford Social Club is in this building, and it had made a grand display of bunting, Chinese lanterns, illuminations, and fire-works. As the head of the column reached the hotel and club-house, the people rushed out upon the balcony, which was some fifty feet in length by six in width, supported only by cast iron brackets. Suddenly, without a moment's warning, the whole structure gave way, precipitating the crowd above for a distance of about two feet upon the densely crowded sidewalk below.

As soon as the panic-stricken multitude could regain their presence of mind every effort was made to extricate the wounded. For a minute after the fall there was hardly a whisper, and then the rush to the wreck was exciting. The women uttered screams of horror, and the men groaned with pain. The soldiers, encumbered with their arms, could do little, and before they could get themselves ready for action the unhurt persons on the sidewalk had lifted the shattered frame and were bearing away the wounded. Some forty or more persons were more or less injured some two or three it is thought, fatally.

A Deluged City.

News received from Pioche, Nev., some 400 miles south of Salt Lake, show that that town has been deluged with a terrific storm of hail and rain. At about four o'clock one afternoon the sky rapidly grew dark, until people in the streets could scarcely recognize each other and a feeling of foreboding irresistible to every one. At half-past four a few great drops of rain, and in a few moments a perfect deluge came down from the heavy clouds of blackness. For four hours the storm raged. The main street of the town became a roaring, seething torrent, the water running three feet deep and with tremendous force. Boxes, barrels, carts, huge boulders, and everything movable, were swept along with irresistible force. The cross streets at every corner added to the river, and united in its raging fury. Several teams were carried away, and in one or two cases men caught by the flood narrowly escaped with their lives. Saloons, stores, dwellings, and stables were completely flooded, and their inhabitants were forced to remain in the upper stories until the storm ceased. In four hours from the time of the commencement the fury had spent itself, the river subsided, quiet ensued, and the people began casting about them and estimating the amount of damage suffered. The total loss must be many thousands of dollars. All agree that they never before witnessed such streets, the floods of rain coming down as if a lake had been emptied upon the town. Pioche will hereafter date from its terrific rain-storm and extraordinary deluge.

"A startling piece of news," says the Register of Central City, Colorado, "has just come to hand; no less than a minute description, by more than one credible witness, of a volcano bursting forth a few miles north of us. We were inclined at first to doubt the statement, but it comes so straight, and the story is so well told, that it seems there must be something in it. The facts are that last Thursday, Burke, a reliable man of this place, was out prospecting near the head of the North Boulder. (Your correspondent having been over that country, is prepared to testify that in ages past volcanic eruptions must have been common.) Our prospector saw smoke at a distance, which he at first attributed to fire in the woods. But second thought convinced him that was not possible, as its locality was far above timber line. So, with the usual zeal of a prospector for something new, he clambered up and down over several ridges of the main range, until arriving at the place he found himself on the edge of a veritable crater. The place had evidently once been the scene of great and long continued volcanic action, for there was plainly to be traced the rim of a prehistoric crater about one mile in diameter. Within the ancient bowl and near the edge the young volcano had commenced operations. It did not emit violently while he was there, but contented itself with occasional spasm. The rest of the time smoking as pleasantly as an old tobacco pipe. But the best proofs of its story are bits of lava, evidently of recent origin, and several lumps of scoria. These are now being handed about among the boys, and are regarded with as much curiosity and interest as is ever manifested in the last rich 'strike.' A large party will start from here in a few days, determined to authenticate or disprove the matter. Several men have already been there, and all return with lava trophies."

John T. Harper, Collector of Internal Revenue at Springfield Ill., is a defaulter to a large amount.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J.

As a Country Home for Business Men and Others.

BLOOMFIELD is located four miles from the centre of Newark, and twelve miles from New York City, is on Elevated Ground, with as beautiful sites for HOMES of families as any within a radius of 25 miles of New York. Its location is healthy beyond dispute. Its to Newark and to New York are unsurpassed: the Newark & Bloomfield Road (D. L. & W. to New York) with 22 trains daily; the Montclair (to New York direct) with nearly as many; the Watchung, nearly completed; nine depots on the three roads and so located as to accommodate all parts of the town. A Horse Car Railroad to Newark, cars running every half hour.

Educational Privileges.

Bloomfield was the pioneer township for FREE EDUCATION in this State. We have now as fine a Public School as any in New Jersey—the buildings, grounds, etc., as well as the conduct of the various departments—High School, Grammar and Primary—are all that can be desired.

Our Churches

embrace the principal denominations, and all are in a flourishing condition. The moral and social status of the community is of a high order.

Improvements, &c.

The permanent mapping of the town for streets and squares is being effected. The sidewalks are being generally flagged or planked. Gas is already introduced. Commodious and artistic dwellings are being erected. Improvements in opening and grading new streets are being pushed forward, not in a wholesale, speculative manner, involving heavy taxes, but commensurate with the wants of the community. The local taxes have been lower and will continue to be lower than most of our neighboring townships. Bloomfield has never been bonded; neither for railway nor any other purposes. Her citizens are enterprising and progressive, but hold to the principle—Pay as you go. There are numerous stores and workshops of various kinds, several first-class manufacturing, none of them, however, of a character detrimental to health or morals. It has also a live Weekly Newspaper, devoted to the interests of the town collectively.

Real Estate,

Improved and unimproved is offered at prices below those of other towns the same distance from the large cities. Property here has steadily advanced in value for the last fifteen years. The causes which produced that advance have just now greatly augmented. Intelligent business men can judge at once whether this town is not SAFE as a place of investment, independent of the wish for a pleasant and desirable home. Improved and unimproved lands in great variety may be found upon application to our Real Estate Agencies.
